DENIED MEDICAL RELIEF

Zion City Children Stricken With Diphtheria is Refused Relief by Mother

IS WORST CASE REPORTED

George Sparks of Zion City Willing to Take Anti-Toxin But Wife Prevents It for the Children

Lake County authorities again face a problem which has confronted them many times before in Zion City, where sickness has invaded households and where medical aid would help save lives of victims but where absolute refusal is encountered from the heads of the family. The case this time is in the family of George Sparks of Gabriel avenue and it is somewhat different than previous cases in that the father, seeing his wife and three children stricken with diphtheria, is willing to have the prescribed anti-toxin treatment given to them but where the mother refuses to permit it because of her faith which says physicians have no place on earth.

One child, a boy, Russell, aged four is dead, an eleven year old boy, George is very sick with the same trouble and a babe is also at the point of death. Besides this both the father and mother have the throat trouble in a bad form and it is feared that the three other children will contract the disease.

In the meantime, members of the old Dowie faith are praying over Mrs. Sparks and her children and declare that they will cure them in time, while the father almost unable to swallow has given up in despair his efforts to induce his wife to try and save the children and herself by the use of anti-toxin and finally instructed the doctor to let him go, saying "If they won't let you take care of George he'll have to go to and then he'll be with Russell."

The case is one of the worst of its kind that has developed in the city in a long time. Thursday afternoon of last week Dr. John Turner of Waukegan was called by the father who said that he feared the children were suffering from diphtheria. Dr. Turner at once found that the cases were most severe and advised the use of anti-toxin to which the father readily consented.

The mother however objected strongly to the use of the drug. The medicine was however administered but according to the physician too late and little Russell died at midnight. The next day when Dr. Turner returned he found the child dead and took steps to notify the coroner, but found that health officer Speicher of Zion had issued a certificate and the boy was already buried, and as Dr. Speicher is a licensed physician nothing could be done. The doctor again prepared to administer the remedy but again the mother strongly objected and the father at last ordered that her wishes be respected. However, he explained that he was not a member of the sect and allowed the medicine to be administered to himself.

LABORER COMMITS SUICIDE

Ered Meyer, sixty-five years old, for years employed as a laborer in the Edward Brown ice house at Round Lake, is dead, the result of a bullet wound in his head. Attending circumstances leads to the belief that he committed suicide.

His dead body was found in the ice house Monday morning by employees. The fact that Meyer had several hundred dollars in the bank shows that poverty could not have led him to the act and adds an element of mystery to the deed.

According to the residents of Round Lake Meyer had been drinking rather heavily of late and they think that this may have had something to do with the taking of his own life. So far as is known Meyer had no relatives.

DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Mrs. Orpha Runyard Passed Away on Saturday of Last Week.

Another home was robbed of the presence of one of its loved ones when on Saturday afternoon of last week Mrs. Frank Runyard passed away at her home on North Main street.

For the past two or three years she has been in poor health and for the past few months has failed very rapidly although she was confined to the house only about a week previous to her death, which was caused by that dread disease consumption. During the last few months of her illness she was a great sufferer but was most patient and enduring to the last. Realizing that the end was drawing near she calmly talked to those about her of her death and expressed many wishes which were faithfully carried out. Her chief desire was to live to see her sister, Mrs. Eugene Hawkins, who has for the past two years resided in Texas and whom she was aware was to return to Illinois to reside some time this fall, and when this wish had been gratified she expressed a perfect willingness to go.

Miss Orpha Little was born at Catherine Lake on the 21st day of August, 1881, and passed away at her home in this village on the twenty-ninth day of October 1910 at the age of twenty-nine years, two months and eight days—just in the prime of her life.

She grew to womanhood in this vicinity and on the first day of February, 1900, she was united in marriage to Frank E. Runyard and to them two daughters were born, Ethel, aged nine and Lucile, aged eight, both of whom are left with the father to mourn the loss of the one dearest to them all. Besides her immediate family she is survived by her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo P. Little of Grass Lake, and seven sisters, Mrs. Robt. Runyard, Mrs. Wm. Runyard, Mrs. Chas. Runyard, Mrs. Eugene Hawkins, and the Misses Edna, Marena and Louise Little all of this community besides many other relatives and friends.

The funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at half past one o'clock at the M. E. church, with Rev. A. O. Stixrud officiating and with the members of Olsen Camp number 469, R. N. A. and the Rebekahs of which orders the deceased was a member, attending in a body, and with the brothers-in-law of the deceased acting as pall bearers. The many beautiful floral tokens in a measure expressed the high esteem in which the departed was held by all who knew her.

The remains were laid at rest in the Grass Lake cemetery.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our thanks to our neighbors and friends for their many acts of kindness during the sickness and death of our wife and mother. And especially do we thank the Royal Neighbors, the Rebekah's and the Court of Honor for the beautiful floral tokens and also those who furnished music.

ATTEMPT TO MAIM FIREMEN

Hollowe'en Pranks of Boys in Waukegan Nearly Prove Fatal to Firemen

SET FIRE TO AN OLD SHED

Miscreants Place Telephone Pole Across Street After Setting a Fire and Then Summon Fire Department

As usual Hollowe'en pranks were played in every locality and while in some cases damage to property was created, the damage in this direction is reported to be less than in former years, due partially to the fact that the old board walks have been for the most part replaced by cement and there are also fewer wooden horse blocks than in former years and that the old picket gate is almost a thing of the past.

One despicable act has been reported that stands out above all the others and if the perpetrators could be located, they would be entitled to a heavy fine and a jail sentence for the offense.

The affair took place in Waukegan. Miscreants set fire to an old shed in the Steele lot corner North and Gillett ave. thus calling out the fire department. The fire of itself amounted to nothing for the shed was practically useless. But after starting the fire, the miscreants, in an apparent effort to cause a fatality to the fire department when it responded to its call to duty, placed a telegraph pole across the street along which the firemen would surely pass.

The horse wagon going west at a terrific clip, neared the pole across the street and not until they were within ten feet of it did driver Gray notice the obstruction. Capt. Stewart on the seat with the driver also saw it and acted quickly. Bracing himself for the shock he threw both arms about Gray and held to him as the wheels crashed into the pole, had he not done so both men would have been thrown and perhaps seriously injured. The wagon pole was broken but fortunately no more serious damage was done. But it is what might have been that makes the offense a serious one. The police are making an effort to trace the offenders and if caught they are likely to be prosecuted for malicious mischief.

WAUKEGAN MEN BUILD AEROPLANE

Not content with punching transfers and tickets and clanging the bell on a street car, M. E. Bently regular day conductor on the west end line of the Chicago & Milwaukee electric line at Waukegan longs to soar above the clouds in an aeroplane.

His first fall from grace as a street car conductor was about a year ago when to the astonishment and envy of his fellow trainmen he ordered an automobile.

But now to add to their astonishment it has been learned that he with three of his friends are working on one of the future juggernauts of the air.

Few details of the structure plane can be learned at present as the young man is just now in the hospital.

As near as can be learned the young men are planning to build an aeroplane which will be a new departure in the field of air flight. The machine is to cost $2,400 each of the young men placing $600 on the venture.

The operations have so far been kept secret as the young men wish to try out their invention before it is made public. The machine is being built along the lines of the Wright brothers' biplane with many objectionable features of their invention eliminated.

PROPOSED NEW BRIDGE

Plans are Being Formed for the Erection of a $60,000 Bridge Across Pistakee

WOULD SAVE MUCH TRAVEL

Menster Concrete Bridge Across North End of Pistakee Lake to Connect Lake and McHenry Counties

Residents of Fox as well as Chicago property owners and owners of property in McHenry County, just over the Lake County line are now considering an improvement which will bring Lake and McHenry County closer together than they now are in the Fox Lake region.

The project being planned is to erect a monster concrete bridge across the north end of Pistakee lake, just south of the St Paul bridge, to be used for teams and pedestrians in crossing over from the territory which is now separated by water. As it is now, people wishing to go to McHenry county line or vice versa, have to go clear to Johnsonburg or to McHenry to the south and then drive way out around, the trip thus being many miles.

If the bridge were across Pistakee many miles travel would be saved and that is what the promoters are now considering, and, from what has been heard it appears as if the plans will go through.

It is stated that the proposed bridge would cost about $60,000 and would be from 300 to 400 feet long. The bridge would either be built high enough to permit boats passing in under it or there would be a turn table in the center, such as the St. Paul now has in its bridge.

The improvements would enhance the value of property greatly in that section and would bring the people of the locality into closer communication, thus working to the advantage of all, particularly Fox Lake village.

It is also being proposed that a bridge be built at the east end of Pistakee lake from Fox Lake island, to both the north and south with two short bridges, much smaller than the big bridge mentioned.

The fact is, Fox Lake has a boom on and people are much interested and enthused over developing that section. One thing now being done which interests motor people is that gangs of men and teams have been at work cutting down over six feet of the terrific grade leading to the Mincola hotel, also to the west of there, making the highway very much more easy to travel than it has been, for the hill has been almost impassable and hard for teams to make.

PROMINENT CITIZEN DEAD

C. M. Manly Expires After an Illness of Only a Few Days.

Last Saturday morning the many friends of C. M. Manly were shocked to learn of his sudden death which occurred at an early hour that morning. His death was of a most sudden and unexpected nature he having been ill but a short time. Although he had not been feeling well for about a week he was confined to the house only a couple of days. Friday afternoon he took to his bed but slept naturally all night and was far from being considered serious. A little after six he spoke to his wife who hastened to his side to find him in a dying condition. Two physicians were summoned but Mr. Manly lived only a short time passing away at about seven o'clock.

Charles Milford Manly was born on a farm in West Jersey township, Stark Co., Ill., May 8, 1859, and died Oct., 29, 1910. He was the third and youngest son of Oliver B. and Elizabeth A. Manly. With his parents he moved to Galva, Ill., in the year of 1863, where he went to school until able to teach. He began teaching public school when near the age of 18 years, having taught in Knox, Peoria, Henry, Stark and Lake counties, his last terms of school being in Antioch in the years of 1902 and 1903, he having taught school continuously for 29 years. In the year of 1903 he began working for the Barker Lumber Co., at Antioch in whose employ he remained until the company changed hands and became known as the Goodrich Lumber company with whom he remained until the time of his death. He was converted and united with the Methodist Episcopal church at Galva, Ill., in the year of 1878. He was granted a license as an exhorter to preach in the year of 1880. He joined Lotus Camp, M. W. A. in the year of 1904 and was also a member of Irwin Dist., Court of Honor as well as of Sequoit lodge A. F. and A. M. As a Christian his life needs no comment here; as a teacher he had few if any equals, as a citizen and business man he had the confidence and respect of all.

He was united in marriage to Miss Florence Olmstead, on the sixteenth of Nov. 1886, and to them five children were born, one of whom died in infancy. At the time of his death the departed was 51 years, 5 months and 21 days of age. Besides his widow, three sons and one daughter he is survived by one brother H. W. Manly of La Fayette, Ill., and three sisters, Mrs. Verna Cronin of West Jersey, Ill., Mrs. Laura Morris, and Mrs. Emma Jones of La Fayette, Ill.

The funeral services were held at the M. E. church Monday afternoon at two o'clock, the Woodmen having charge. Rev. A. O. Stixrud who officiated closing as his text "Blessed are they who die in the Lord." The remains were interred in the Hillside cemetery.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank the Masons, Woodman and Court of Honor lodges, also the Royal Neighbors and the Eastern Star for the beautiful flowers and for their kindness shown to us during our sad affliction. And we also wish to thank the choir for the beautiful songs. Mrs. C. M. Manly, children, brother and sisters.

FOX LAKE COUPLE MARRIED AT KENOSHA

There was a quiet little marriage ceremony performed at the office of Municipal Judge Randall in Kenosha last Saturday afternoon, the contracting parties being Mrs. Addie Gilpin, daughter of Col. John P. Vidyvart of Fox Lake and Mr. Clarence Ostrander, also of Fox Lake.

After the ceremony which was performed by Judge Randall a wedding luncheon was served at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Gardner on English Court.

Mr. and Mrs. Ostrander are both well known in the vicinity of Antioch and Fox Lake. The couple will make their future home at McHenry.

Lights on Baby Carriage. "I was puzzled the other night by two lights which kept approaching me on the sidewalk," said a wayfarer; "I finally made out that they were on a baby carriage. It struck me as a pretty good idea, for the lights didn't seem to bother the baby at all and they certainly kept people from running into the carriage in the dark. The lanterns were made like small carriage lamps and were fastened in sockets."

RATHER DIE THAN WORK

Edward Jahnke When Told He Must go to Work Tries to End His Life

INHALES ILLUMINATING GAS

Twenty-Six Year Old Waukegan Man When Told He Must Support Himself Tries to End Life

Because he preferred death to working, Edward Jahnke, 26 years old, of 105 Lowe avenue, Waukegan, eldest son of Contractor and Mrs. August Jahnke, Tuesday morning sought to commit suicide by inhaling gas. His father detected the odor and secured a crow-bar broke down the door of his son's room and rescued him just in the nick of time. Attending physicians declare he could have lived but a short time longer had he not been rescued when he was.

According to friends, Jahnke had been out all night and returning home in the morning about 9 o'clock found all his folks away. It is believed he went to his room almost immediately and turned on the gas and laid down on the bed.

Contractor Jahnke declared to friends that his son never would work. Time after time his parents had besought him to secure some kind of work but after working a short time he would quit and return home to stay with his parents. His father stated that not only has he been obliged to keep his son in spending money but has been obliged to purchase his clothes also. He says he called the turn a week ago when he told his son that he must either go to work or leave home and strike out for himself. This is believed to have been the motive that impelled him to commit suicide.

Just how long he had laid in the gas-filled room is not known but when the father returned home shortly after 10 o'clock the odor of gas was noticeable in the lower part of the house. Without suspecting the cause he made his way to the upper part of the house and traced the odor to the door of his son's room. He pounded on the door and demanded admittance and when he received no answer sought to break it in but it defied his efforts. Then he secured the crow-bar and broke it from the hinges.

The moment he opened the door the overwhelming odor of gas caused him to stagger back for a moment. Then he went in. The first thing that caught his gaze was the prostrate form of his son on the bed. Quicker than it takes to tell it he had the young man in his arms and was staggering out of the room and down the stairs.

He dragged the gas victim into the open air and laid him on the grass. Returning to the house he secured some bed clothing and laid this under him. He then summoned physicians who upon their arrival found that the victim had inhaled just enough gas to anaesthetize him. They said it would have taken little more to make his condition critical. As it was he recovered consciousness after a time and at the request of his father he was removed to the county jail so that when he fully recovered his senses he might not seek to take his life in some other manner.

Bread and Butter.

There is no place in which bread and butter can be so beneficial or poisonous as in the nursery. The worst thing you can give a young baby, under a year old, is bread, says a writer. But later on bread becomes useful. It should never be given now to a child at any age, but stale bread or toast, or bread baked crisp in the oven, is excellent for children. They really want more crisp foods nowadays, and if this fact was taken to heart the next generation would suffer less from decayed teeth and weak digestion.

The Boy and His Surroundings.

A boy's room has every chance of being one of the most interesting rooms in the house. It may be a workshop in the basement or in the rear extension, an improvised corner in the open attic, or a small study, but if it enters into the spirit of a boy's activities, it is sure to be a go looking and well-furnished room, mind is all powerful in the development or elevation of a material boy should early realize that over his surroundings. The material so humble but it achieved through thought.

The Courage of Captain Plum

SYNOPSIS.

Capt. Nathaniel Plum, of the sloop Typhoon, lands secretly on Beaver Island, stronghold of the Mormons. He is suddenly confronted by Obadiah Price, an eccentric old man and a member of the Mormon council, who tells him that he is expected. Price ignores Nat's protestations that he has not the wrong man, and bargains for the ammunition aboard the sloop. He binds Nat by a solemn oath to deliver a package to Franklin Pierce, president of the United States. Near Price's cabin Nat sees the frightened face of a young woman who disappears in the darkness, leaving an odor of lilacs. It develops that Plum's visit to the island is to demand settlement from the King, Strang, for the looting of his ship some time previously, supposedly by Mormons. Cases, the male, has been left in charge of the sloop with orders to keep it safe. James if Nat does not return within a certain time, Price takes Nat in the darkness, to the king's home, and through a window he sees the king and his wives, among whom is the lady of the house, whom Price says is the seventh wife. Plum calls at the king's office, where he is warned by a young woman that his life is in danger. Strang receives Plum cordially, professing indignation when he hears the captain's grievance, and promises to punish the guilty. Plum again receives warning of his danger. He rescues Nat, who is being punished, and the king orders Arber, Crocker, the sheriff and father of Winansome, the girl who warned Nat, to pursue and kill the two men. Plum and Nat plan to escape on the Typhoon. Plum turns that Strang, the chief of the island, is Nat's sister. She is not yet married to Strang. Plum suggests carrying her off on the ship. Nat approves. They agree to include Winansome, with whom Price is in love, in the enterprise. Nat discovers that the sloop is gone. He meets Marlon and tells her that he has left the island. The thunder of a gun is heard and Marlon tells him his ship has been captured by the Mormons. She pleads with him to leave the island and prevent her brother from returning. She says nothing can save her from Strang.

She surrendered to the determination in his voice and they moved slowly along the path, listening for any sound that might come from ahead of them. Nathaniel had already formed his plan of action. From Marlon's words and the voice in which she had uttered them he knew that it would be useless for him as it had been for Nell to urge her to flee from the island. There remained but one thing for him to do, so he fell back upon the scheme which he had proposed to Marlon's brother. He realized now that he might be compelled to play the game single-handed unless he could secure assistance from Obadiah. His ship and men were in the hands of the Mormons; Nell, in his search for the captured vessel, stood a large chance of missing him that night, and in that event Marlon's fate would depend on him alone. If he could locate a small boat on the beach back of Obadiah's, if he could, in some way lure Marlon to it—He gave an involuntary shudder at the thought of using force upon the girl, at his side, at the thought of her terror of those first few moments, her struggles, her broken confidence. She believed in him now. She believed that he loved her. She trusted him. The warm soft pressure of her hand as it clung to his arm in the blackening gloom of the forest was evidence of that trust. She looked into his face anxiously, inquiringly, when they stopped to listen, like a child who was sure of a stronger spirit at her side. She held her breath when he held his, she listened when he listened, her feet fell with velvet stillness, when he stepped with caution. Her confidence in him was like a beautiful dream. To Nathaniel and he trembled when he pictured the destruction of it. After a little he reached over and as if by accident touched the hand that was lying on his arm; he dared more after a moment, and drew the warm little fingers into his great strong palm and held them there, his soul thrilled by their gentle subservience. And then in another breath there came to still his joy a thought of the terrible power that chained this girl to the Mormon klog. He longed to speak words of encouragement to her, to instill hope in her bosom, to ask her to confide in him the secret of the shadow which hung over her, but the memory of what Nell had said to him held his lips closed.

They had walked in silence for many minutes when the girl stopped. "It is not very far now," she whispered. "You must go!" "Only a little farther," he begged. She surrendered again, hesitatingly, and they went on, more slowly than before, until they came to where the path met the footway that led to Obadiah's.

"Cause I love you—love you—" He freed her hand and stood back, choking the words that would have revealed his secret. He led now for the love of this girl. "Nell is out there waiting for me in a small boat," he continued, pointing beyond Obadiah's to the lake. "I will see him soon, and then I will return to Obadiah's to tell you if he has left for the mainland. Will you promise to meet me there—tonight?"

"I will promise."

"At midnight—"

"Yes, at 12 o'clock."

This time it was Marlon who came to him. Her eyes shone like stars. "And if you make Nell go to the mainland," she said softly, "when I meet you I will—will tell you—something."

The last word came in a breathless sob. As she slipped into the path that led to St. James she paused for a moment and called back, in a low voice: "Tell Nell that he must go for Winansome's sake. Tell him that her fate is shortly to be as cruel as mine—tell him that Winansome loves him, and that she will escape and come to him on the mainland. Tell him to go—go!"

She turned again, and Nathaniel stood like a statue, hardly breathing, until the sound of her feet had died away. Then he walked swiftly up the foot path that led to Obadiah's. He forgot his own danger in the excitement that pulsated with every fiber of his being, forgot his old caution and the fears that gave birth to it—forgot everything in those moments but Marlon and his own great happiness. Nell's absence meant nothing to him now. He had held Marlon in his arms, he had told her of his love, and though she had accepted it with gentle unresponsiveness, he was thrilled by the memory of that last look in her eyes, which had spoken faith, confidence, and perhaps even more. What was that something she would tell him if he got Nell safely away? It was to be a reward for his own loyalty—he knew that, by the half-fearing tremble of her voice, the sobbing catch of her breath, the strange glow in her eyes. With her brother away she would confide in him? Would she tell him the secret of her slavery to Strang? Nathaniel was conscious of no madness in the wild hope that filled him; nothing seemed impossible to him now. Marlon would meet him at midnight. She would go with him to the boat, and then—ah, he had solved the problem! He would use no force. He would tell her that Nell was in his canoe half a mile out from the shore and that he had promised to leave the island for good if she would go out to bid him good-by. And once there, a half a mile or a mile away, he would tell her that he had lied to her; and he would give her his heart to trample upon to prove the love that had made him do this thing, and then he would row her to the mainland.

It was the sight of Obadiah's cabin that brought his caution back. He came upon it so suddenly that an exclamation of surprise fell unguarded from his lips. There was no light to betray life within. He tried the door and found it locked. He peered in at the windows, listened, and knocked, and at last concealed himself near the path, confident that the little old counselor was still at St. James. For an hour he waited. From the rear of Obadiah's home a narrow footway led toward the lake and Nathaniel followed it, now as warily as an animal in search of prey. For half a mile it took him through the forest and ended at the white sands of the beach. In neither direction could Nathaniel see a light, and keeping close in the shadows of the trees he made his way slowly toward St. James. He had gone but a short distance when he saw a house directly ahead of him, a single gleam of light from a small window telling him that it was inhabited and that its tenants were at home. He circled down close to the water looking for a boat. His heart leaped with sudden exultation when he saw a small skiff drawn upon the beach and his joy was doubled at finding the oars still in the locks. It took him but a moment to shove the light craft into the sea and a minute later he was rowing swiftly away from the land.

Nathaniel was certain that by this time Nell had abandoned his search for the captured Typhoon and was probably paddling in the direction of St. James. With the hope of intercepting him he pulled an eighth of a mile from the shore and rowed slowly toward the head of the island. There was no moon, but countless stars glowed in a clear sky and upon the open lake Nathaniel could see for a considerable distance about him. For another hour he rowed back and forth and then beached his boat within a dozen rods of the path that came down from Obadiah's.

It was 10 o'clock. Two more hours! He had tried to suppress his excitement, his apprehension, his eagerness, but now as he went back into the darkness of the forest they burst out anew. What if Marlon should not keep the tryst? He thought of the aplos whom Nell had said guarded the girl's home—and of Obadiah. Could he trust the old counselor? Should he confide his plot to him and ask his assistance? As the minutes passed and these thoughts recurred again and again in his brain he could not keep the nervousness from growing within him. He was sure now that he would have to fight his battle with-out Nell. He saw the necessity of coolness, of judgment, and he began to demand these things of himself, struggling sternly against these symptoms of weakness which had replaced his confidence of a short time before. Gradually he fought himself back into his old faith. He would save Marlon—without Nell, without Obadiah. If Marlon did not come to him by midnight it would be because of the guards against whom Nell had warned him, and he would go to her. In some way he would get her to the boat, even if he had to fight his way through Arber Crocker's men.

With this return of confidence Nathaniel's thoughts reverted to his present greatest need, which was food. Since early morning he had eaten nothing and he began to feel the physical want in a craving that was becoming acutely uncomfortable. If Obadiah had not returned to his home he made up his mind that he would find entrance to the cabin and help himself. A sudden turn in the path which he was following, however, revealed one of the counselor's windows aglow with light, and as he pressed quietly around the end of the building the sound of a low voice came to him through the open door. Cautiously he approached and peered in. A large oil lamp, the light of which he had seen in the window, was burning on a table in the big room but the voice came from the little closet into which Obadiah had taken him the preceding night. For several minutes he crouched and listened. He heard the chuckling laugh of the old counselor—and then an incoherent raving that set his blood tingling. There is a horror in the sound of madness, a horror that creeps to the very pit of one's soul, that sends shivering dread from every nerve center, that causes one who is alone with it to sweat with a nameless fear. It was the voice of madness that came from that little room. Before it Nathaniel quailed as if a clammy hand had reached out from the darkness and gripped him by the throat. He drew back shivering in every limb, and the voice followed him, shrieking now in a sudden burst of insane mirth and dying away a moment later in a hollow cackling laugh that seemed to curdle the blood in his veins. Mad! Obadiah Price was mad! Step by step Nathaniel fell back from the door. He felt himself trembling from head to foot. His heart thumped within his breast like the beating of a hammer. For an instant there was silence—a silence in which strange dread held him breathless while he watched the glow in the door and listened. And after that quiet there came suddenly a cry that ended in the exultant chattering of a name.

At the sound of that name Nathaniel sprang forward again. It was Marlon's name and he strained his ears to catch the words that might follow it. As he listened, his head thrust half in at the door, Obadiah's voice became lower and lower, until at last it ceased entirely. Not a step, not a deep breath, not the movement of a hand disturbed the stillness of the little room. By inches Nathaniel drew himself inside the door. His heavy boot caught in a silver on the step but the rending of wood brought no response. It was the quiet of death that pervaded the cabin, it was a strange, growing fear of death that entered Nathaniel as he now hurried across the room and peered through the narrow aperture. The old counselor was half stretched upon the table, his arms reaching out, his long, thin fingers gripping his edges, his face buried under his shoulders. It looked as if death had come suddenly to him during some terrible convulsion, but after a moment Nathaniel saw that he was breathing. He went over and placed a hand on the old man's twisted back.

"Hello, Obadiah! Hello—hello!" he called cheerfully.

The Guarantee.

Apologies of the superb additions to Metropolitan museum in New York, F. Hopkinson Smith said:

"They are good works, too. They are all good works. Not like our American Rembrandts."

"I am afraid that most of our millionaires bought their Rembrandts too carelessly—much as Golsa Golde bought his."

"Golsa Golde, accompanied by his daughter, Miss Letta, picked out a Rembrandt at a foreign dealer's, and then, before planting down the cash said, very sternly:

"Now, see here, sir, do you guarantee this Rembrandt?"

"Yes, Mr. Golde," the dealer replied. "A seven years' guarantee goes with the canvas."

"Oh, very well," said Golsa, mollified, and he took out his check book and fountain pen."

ARE STRANGE TWINS

Missouri County Claims Distinction in Unusual Kinship.

Man and Tree Made Their Start in Life on the Same Day and Have Grown Up Together—Now 63 Years Old.

St. Louis, Mo.—New Garden neighborhood in Ray county, Missouri, boasts the possession of unique twins, a man and a tree, 63 years old. March 15, 1847, saw the birth, on his father's farm near New Garden, of Samuel Highower. The same day Elias and Thomas, older brothers of the new arrival, set out in the yard before the house a slip of a sugar tree, or hard maple, as many know it.

Thus the two made their start in life together, and thus while the babe that was to be a man, hard thinking and hard working, fought its way through the precarious first days of its existence to a secure hold on life, before the door the slip that was to be a tree, great and spreading, underwent the same process.

When passing years had given the youngster sufficient strength to toddle about the yard one of the chief of the innumerable wanderers his round eyes beheld was the sturdy young "sugar tree." His first efforts at climbing were expended on it.

The hard maple is of slow growth, and this one at that time was not large, yet to the child it seemed of great size.

Through the years of his childhood his happiest hours were those spent in scrambling round over its limbs. As he grew older, large enough to take a part in the work in the fields, he found a new pleasure in the sugar tree. Rosting in its shade during the noon period was a pleasing reprieve from the toll in the sunbaked fields.

In time the boy reached man's estate and married, but as the young couple made the old place their home, the association between the twins was not interrupted by this momentous event in the man's life. It was in the tree's shade that the bride party, on arriving at the house, halted to recuperate from the drive through the July heat. The grassy plot beneath it formed the parlor where friends and relatives were entertained on hot days.

When children came to the couple the young mother availed herself of the sugar tree's help in caring for them. A cradle or pallet underneath its boughs, and a mosquito net, insured baby a sound nap.

As time transformed these babies into children they, like their father before them, found their chief delight in climbing about over the tree, and now, though they are grown men and women, they still cherish a deep affection for it. Houses have come and gone from the yard, but each succeeding one has been so built that the sugar tree commanded a place of honor.

The Tree.

or before the front entrance. In planning changes in the place it is always taken into consideration. Nothing is done that may endanger its vigor or detract from its beauty in the least.

Mr. Highower, or "Uncle Sam," as everyone calls him, is inclined to be old fashioned as regards the love of home, and has never traveled much, so in all the 63 years there has scarcely been a day that he has not seen the maple.

Wireless Music.

New York.—A recent test of wireless telephony was made to show its value for transmitting music. Several selections were sung in a transmitter at Park avenue and Fortieth street, New York, and were listened to by a group of newspaper men at the Metropolitan Tower. At times the singing was very clear, but frequently it was impossible to hear anything but a confused blur of sound.

SETS NEW AIR MARK

RALPH JOHNSTONE ATTAINS ALTITUDE OF 9,714 FEET—WINS $2,000 PRIZE.

IS OUT OF SIGHT AN HOUR

Moissant Ready to Race for $10,000 Bet in Dash Around Statue of Liberty—Grahame-White Falls.

New York.—Soaring in the tiny Wright biplane, a craft he had never before driven in his life, Ralph Johnstone brought the international aviation meet at Belmont Park to a close Monday with a blizze of glory by breaking the world's altitude record with a flight of 9,714 feet.

For his daringly spectacular feat he received a prize of $2,000. If he had been able to soar just 287 feet higher he would have won an additional prize of $5,000 offered on the condition that the altitude record be over 10,000 feet. He was prevented from reaching this height because his machine would not climb and more on account of lack of fuel. The previous record was 9,186 feet.

It took Johnstone about one hour and twenty-six minutes to reach his highest point in the sky. For an hour he was utterly beyond the sight of the naked eye. He made his descent from the perilous height of almost two miles in the air in less than six minutes.

A great air race from Belmont Park around the Statue of Liberty in New York bay and return for a bet of $10,000 a side probably will result from a challenge issued by Claude Grahame-White to John B. Moissant. The challenge is the result of Sunday's race over the same course in which Moissant defeated the Englishman by forty-three seconds.

Grahame-White issued the formal challenge and the Chicago aviator said he would accept it.

Moissant, flying the Bleriot in which he captured the Statue of Liberty prize, won the Aero Club of America's distance prize of $2,000. In two hours he made the course fifty-six times, a total distance of about eight-seven and one-half miles.

Moissant made a sensational landing in front of the grand stand, smashing his propeller and breaking one wheel of his monoplane. He climbed out of the machine, however, uninjured. Latham was second in the race with thirty-five laps.

Just as Moissant came down Grahame-White ascended in his Farman biplane in an exhibition flight.

Grahame-White, who was flying in the speed race against McCurdy, over-turned in front of the grand stand and was buried under the machine. Helpers lifted the machine off him and he walked out limping slightly, waving his hand to the crowd to let them know he was not seriously injured. His machine was damaged.

WILSON IS SENT TO OHIO

Secretary of Agriculture Is Fourth Cabinet Officer to Take Part in Ohio Campaign.

Washington.—A fourth cabinet officer has been ordered to Ohio to help the Republican ticket. Secretary of Agriculture Wilson's dates in New York state have been curtailed to enable him to speak in some of the rural districts of President Taft's state.

Secretary Wilson left Monday night for New York state to fill engagements made for him in some of the up-state counties. He is popular among the farmers and the Republicans apparently are more anxious about the voters in the rural districts than they have been for several years.

Secretary Knox, Secretary MacVagh and Attorney General Wickersham are the other cabinet members who will participate in the Ohio campaign.

CHINA TO HAVE PARLIAMENT

Throne Decides to Yield to Popular Demand for Early Convocation of New Body.

Peking.—It is believed the throne has decided to accede to the demand of the senate and the provincial delegates for the early convocation of a popular parliament.

In the senate Monday and in the presence of the leading grand counselors, Prince Yu Liang, a member of the grand council, stated that the entire nation from the highest to the lowest was agreed on the necessity of the early establishment of a general parliament.

The senators, who understood this to mean that their memorial would be granted, received the declaration of the prince with loud and prolonged cheering.

BABY'S TENDER SKIN

Chafed, Sore and Bleeding Quickly Cured

Mrs. J. F. Deal, Kansas City, Kansas, writes:

"I cannot speak too highly of Resinol. When our baby was four months old she was so fat that she chafed in the creases of her legs and body. She was so sore and inflamed that she bled, and was fretting and crying almost constantly. Resinol Ointment was recommended to us. We had tried everything that could be thought of without success, but Resinol cured her in a very short time. We consider it the best household remedy for irritating skin troubles and would not be without it. We are also greatly pleased with Resinol Soap. It is so delightfully refreshing for the bath."

Resinol Ointment, Resinol Tincture and Resinol Medicated Shaving Stick are high grade standard preparations, and their merit and reliability have won them a place in millions of homes. They are for sale at every drug store on the American Continent and by all leading chemists in other countries.

The Key to Germany.

Capt. Charles King, the author, praised at the Milwaukee club, the German element in Milwaukee's population.

"I know a soldier," said Capt. King, "who met the Kaiser last year in Berlin."

"You have a thorough knowledge of our best thought and customs," said the Kaiser. "Have you ever been to Germany before?"

"O, yes, sir," said the soldier.

"What cities have you visited? Berlin and Hamburg?" asked the Kaiser.

"No, sir," said the soldier. "Milwaukee."

What About Him?

The talk had gone back and fro, and the youthful socialist had been announcing that no man ought to get his living by cheating, and we all listened to him, and agreed that it was dreadful when men and women did not tell the truth, but tried to make their living by deceiving people. Millionaires, landowners, financiers, we sacrificed all of them who cheat the public. "No one should make a living by deception," said the young man. Then a quiet voice from a woman came from the corner of the sofa. "What about the conjurer?"—London Chronicle.

Deserved the Shoes.

The weary wayfarer leaned over the fence and watched the housewife doing her chores.

"Ah, lady," he said, tipping his hat. "I used to be a professional humorist. If I tell you a funny story will you give me an old pair of shoes?"

"Well, that depends," responded the busy housewife; "you must remember that brevity is the soul of wit."

"Yes, mum, I remember that, and brevity is the sole of each of my shoes, mum."

THE FIRST TASTE

Learned to Drink Coffee When a Baby.

If parents realized the fact that coffee contains a drug—caffeine—which is especially harmful to children, they would doubtless hesitate before giving the babies coffee to drink.

"When I was a child in my mother's arms and first began to nibble things at the table, mother used to give me sips of coffee. As my parents used coffee exclusively at meals I never knew there was anything to drink but coffee and water."

"And so I contracted the coffee habit early. I remember when quite young the continual use of coffee so affected my parents that they tried roasting wheat and barley, then ground it in the coffee-mill, as a substitute for coffee."

"But it did not taste right and they went back to coffee again. That was long before Postum was ever heard of. I continued to use coffee until I was 27, and when I got into office work, I began to have nervous spells. Especially after breakfast I was so nervous I could scarcely attend to my correspondence."

"At night, after having coffee for supper, I could hardly sleep, and on rising in the morning would feel weak and nervous."

"A friend persuaded me to try Postum. My wife and I did not like it at first, but later when boiled good and strong it was fine. Now we would not give up Postum for the best coffee we ever tasted."

"I can now get good sleep, am free from nervousness and headaches. I recommend Postum to all coffee drinkers."

PROTECTION FOR SONG BIRDS OF THE UNITED STATES

TODAY the songbirds of the United States have thrown about them the strong arm of protection. For a quarter of a century there was hard and systematic work to save creatures who were helpless to save themselves and against whom, as someone has put it, the hand of man and the head of woman constantly were raised. It is hardly necessary to say that the allusion to the head of woman had to do with the fashion of wearing the plumage of native wild birds for decorations for hats and bonnets.

It was a hard fight to get the masses of the people interested in the bird protection movement. Today very little is known in a general way of the manner in which success was wrought out. It is not at all uncommon even now to hear the bird protectors spoken of as mere sentimentalists, and there are men who have had a part in the fight to save the wild life who have been sneered at as effeminate. The truth is that most of the men who engaged in the work of preserving the feathered species were hard-headed and could prove on occasion that they were hard fisted.

It takes only a casual glance at a woman's hat today to show that the fashion of wearing feathers is still if not supreme, at least a ruler to a considerable degree. It should be known, however, that not once in a hundred times do you see on a woman's head today the plumage of a native American bird. The traffic in the feathers of bluebirds, robins, catbirds and other dooryard pets has been almost entirely stopped. Even those who wish that the plumage-wearing habit should cease altogether are powerless to prevent the sale of the feathers of certain species of foreign birds. The egret of which woman is so fond is a part of the plumage of the snowy heron, a bird which lives not only in the United States but in certain foreign countries. If a bird is to be found in America and also abroad the sale of its plumage is generally forbidden in the United States, but there is and always has been, some difficulty in proving from whence came the supply. Law, generally speaking, has its technical loopholes and the bird protective law is not exempt.

Out of the bird protective movement grew the biological survey of the department of agriculture of the United States government. The biological survey has been of great service to the farmers of the United States and to all men engaged either directly or indirectly in any form of agricultural pursuits. When the survey was threatened with extinction a few years ago by the apparent intention of congress to refuse it an appropriation, the farmers of the United States with the bird protectors and the real sportsmen, rose in its defense and saved it. The survey probably will be spared to continue its useful work as long as the agricultural department has existence.

The history of bird protection in the United States naturally and of right, is connected with the history of two organizations, the various state Audubon societies for the protection of wild birds, and the American Ornithologists' union. Recently William Dutcher of New York, who is the president of the National Association of Audubon societies and a fellow of the American Ornithologists' union, told the ornithologists of the world assembled in convention in a European city the story of the bird protection movement in North America. Mr. Dutcher and all the other officers of the National Association of Audubon societies are men who have devoted their lives to the study of birds and to their protection.

A celebrated French scientist said not long ago that if the bird life were to be swept out of existence man could survive only a few months. Because of the ravages of the insect now held in check by the birds, the vegetation creatures would be destroyed by the insect onemies. So it would seem that if this French scientist is right, that in making their fight for the birds the defenders have been making their fight for man, a fact which is not appreciated by some of those who would suffer were it not for the constant saving efforts of men whom on occasion they have seen fit to call cranks.

To lead up to the establishment of the Audubon societies, of which nearly every state in the Union has one, it might be said that it was not until the year 1883 that the public in the United States awakened to the fact that too many wild birds were being slaughtered, largely for millinery ornaments and other decorative purposes. In addition, thousands of song and insectivorous birds were killed annually for food. In his story of the movement for bird protection President Dutcher told of the beginnings of the crusade to save the lives of the songsters which year by year were coming back to the farm and the garden in greatly decreased numbers. Mr. Dutcher said, speaking of the condition in 1883:

"The newspapers published items almost daily on the subject, and many strong editorials were written. A quotation from one of these, entitled 'The Sacrifices of Song Birds' will show the earnestness of the press in respect to the situation: 'The destruction of American wild birds for millinery purposes has assumed stupendous proportions. The untold work gives employment to a vast army of men and women and this army wages its campaign of destruction with a diabolical perfection of system.'

"The editorial in question further refers to details of the work published in other columns of the paper, which furnishes evidence of the ghastly character of the business. The logical result of this newspaper agitation was that the American Ornithologists' union at its annual meeting held in New York city September 30, 1884, appointed a committee of its members to investigate the extent of the alleged wild bird destruction and to devise means to stop the slaughter by legal or any other legitimate method.

"This committee found that the claims of the press and of individuals were not in the least exaggerated, but on the other hand did not fully represent the terrible horrors that were being made on the non-game birds.

National Association of Audubon Societies for the Protection of Wild Birds and Animals has resulted, although in the interim there were many periods when the outlook for bird protection in North America seemed doomed to failure."

It was the result of an appeal made to congress by the council of the Ornithologists' union that led congress to vote an appropriation of $5,000, the money to be administered under the direction of the department of agriculture for the purpose of taking means to save the lives of the native American birds which were useful to man.

As William Dutcher says further in his story of the protective movement:

"In recognition of the action taken by the American Ornithologists' union in securing the appropriation, the secretary of agriculture invited the council of the union to select a superintendent to carry on the work and at a subsequent meeting held in Washington, Dr. Clinton Hart Merriam was selected as the superintendent and Dr. Albert C. Fisher as his assistant. Both of these noted ornithologists were among the founders of the American Ornithologists' union."

It was from this humble beginning that the present biological survey, a division of the United States department of agriculture, has grown. It is perfectly apparent from the letters which agriculturists send to Washington constantly that the work of the biological survey has its value appreciated more and more every year. The survey has published a great mass of valuable statistics of the food habits of birds and their relation to agriculture and forestry.

As has been said, there are Audubon societies for bird protection in nearly every state in the Union. They are affiliated in one great society called the National Association of Audubon societies. The writer of this article from personal knowledge can speak of the beginnings of one of the largest and most active of the state organizations.

Persons who were known to be interested in birds were asked to meet to form a protective organization. A good many persons not particularly interested in bird protection also were invited. Several women came to that first meeting, wearing the plumage of wild birds in their hats. At first the society intended to do its work by persuasive missionary efforts, and along this line to a considerable extent the endeavor has been ever since, but it was soon found that while some people were willing to be guided by pleas of humanity and by stories of the destruction of the growing things because of the rapid increase in insect life, there were others who could not be reached by any except hard handed methods.

So it is that the bird protectors not only have carried on a great work in the education of children and in moral suasion among the elders, but they have taken cases into court and have prosecuted wilful and persistent violators of the law, until today the bird protective laws are as much feared as any other laws on the statute books. There always have been some laws against the wanton killing of useful birds, but until the men and women of the American Ornithologists' union and of the Audubon society went earnestly at their labors the laws were laughed at and violated with impunity and almost always with immunity.

Years ago untold thousands of useful native birds were trapped to be sold as pets in cages. The women of the south, complained to the women of the north who were engaged in bird protection work that their mocking birds and red birds (cardinals) were being trapped in multitudes because of the demand by the trade in northern cities for caged songsters. The bird protectors of the north took the matter up and in nearly all places today it is illegal to sell caged wild native American birds.

About fifteen years ago there was a week of zero weather in some of the southern states. The blue bird, which is a northern favorite, does not go far south in winter to escape all of the storms of the winter season. The unusual cold of that winter fifteen years ago almost annihilated the tribe of bluebirds. There were only a few left to come back to the northern fields in the spring. The blue bird, however, was protected, and the efficiency of the Audubon society's work was never more clearly shown than in this case. The blue birds today have recruited their ranks under protection and are as numerous as ever they were.

For years the bird protectionists went ahead with their work with the treasury at a low point.

It always had been hoped that some kindly disposed person would realize the strength and beauty of bird protection work and would give of this substance to the cause. The man known as a scientist nor as a bird student. One day, however, Albert Wilcox saw a newspaper account of some of the bird protection work done by the national Association of Audubon societies and he wrote a letter asking for more details. He received the information that he wanted and he wrote to say that he was about to make a new will and felt so much pleased with the work of the society that he would give it annually during his lifetime a considerable sum of money to be used in carrying on the work of the association, and that when he died he would give the society a legacy of $100,000 in his will, and he added, "I may not limit it to this amount."

Albert Wilcox died four years ago. He left $100,000 to the Audubon society as he had promised, and in addition he made the society his residuary legatee to the extent of one-half his estate. Today the National Association of Audubon societies, through the generosity of Mr. Wilcox, is placed on a sure and lasting foundation. The bird protective work has been going on for a quarter of a century. It had all sorts of trials and tribulations, but today it seems that the friends of the feathered kingdom have triumphed in their cause. The promise is that there will be no cessation of the work which means so much to the bird and more to man.

A notoriously close-fisted man was taking his golfing holiday in Scotland, where he hoped to improve his game, and, by driving a hard bargain, had managed to secure the exclusive services of a first-class caddy, who was known to be a very good player. "Aye," replied the Scotsman, hitching up the heavy bag, "an' Ah'm expectin' the like frae yo, ye ken!"—Golf Illustrated.

While helping to raise the house belonging to Mrs. Mary Williams on Saturday last, "Windy Bill" met with a peculiar accident. When the house had been raised almost to the height of three feet in some way it slipped from its blocking and slid again onto the original foundation. The sudden jar caused the chimney to fall, and in an effort to get out of the danger line he ran directly into the path of the falling bricks, with the result that he was severely cut and bruised on the head and back. He was taken to his home at Trevor on the 3:15 train.

Better Look Outside.
If you want to make the best of your life, don't spend much time in looking within and wondering if your feelings are all right. Look outside instead, and see what you are doing for others, what you are saying about other people, how you are behaving to these around you. If you are behaving kindly and truly to your neighbor you will not go far wrong.

CUP WON BY BRITON

GRAHAME-WHITE LIFTS BENNETT TROPHY—MAKES 62 MILES IN 61 MINUTES.

LE BLANC AND BROOKINS FALL

Neither Are Seriously Hurt, but Their Aeroplanes Are Smashed—Malsant Files a Spectacular Race Around Statue of Liberty.

New York.—In the fastest time ever recorded for the full distance of 62.14 miles around a five kilometer course, Claude Grahame-White, flying for the Royal Aero club of the United Kingdom, Saturday won the Gordon-Bennett international speed cup from his American and French competitors.

His average speed was a fraction better than 61 miles an hour, and his fastest lap was 2:55:77, but Alfred Le Blanc, in a similar machine, a 100 horsepower Dierlot monoplane, was making each lap on an average of 20 seconds faster than Grahame-White and would have won the cup if he had not met with a disastrous accident in his last lap, when he had the race seemingly well in hand.

Le Blanc was running with the wind under full power at an estimated speed of 80 miles an hour when the feed pipe from his gasoline tank to his motor loosened under the incessant jarring of the engine and he suddenly found himself with nothing but momentum to carry him. When a puff of wind caught him he drifted sideways, still driving at tremendous speed, and crashed head foremost into a telegraph pole.

The pole was 14 inches thick, but he broke it in three places as if it had been a toothpick.

In addition to Le Blanc's accident, the program was marred by a serious mishap to Walter Brookins of the Wright team, who had taken up the new "baby" Wright racer for the first time.

Brookins was just coming around the turn into the homestretch for a trial circle preparatory to entering into the Gordon Bennett race when four of his eight cylinders ceased firing.

Driven by the wind and his engine, he came hurtling through the air at such tremendous speed that when he touched the earth his front wheels and forward frame collapsed and he was buried under its debris. Neither of the men were badly hurt.

John B. Malsant, the American who flew from Paris to London, was the victor in a most perilous and spectacular race.

Dashing at more than a mile a minute speed from Belmont park to the Statue of Liberty in New York harbor and back again to Belmont park, a distance of 33 miles as the crow flies, he won over Count de Lesseps, the French aviator, and Claude Grahame-White, the English champion, by a margin of 45 seconds.

HAITIEN GUNBOAT BLOWN UP

The Liberte sailed from this port last Monday, having on board 90 persons. Among the 70 who were lost were ten Haitien generals.

Details are lacking, the only definite information being as to the loss of life and the fact that an explosion occurred.

Springfield, Ill.—After a fruitless deliberation of forty-three hours, the jury which considered the evidence against Senator Stanton C. Pemberton and Representative Joseph S. Clark, charged with conspiracy to commit bribery in connection with a state furniture contract, was unable to agree upon a verdict and was dismissed by Judge Owen P. Thompson Saturday. The final ballot stood eight to four for conviction. Following the discharge of the jury, State's Attorney Burke announced that an immediate hearing of the case will be had.

STUBBS FLAYS HIGH RATES

GOVERNOR STAR WITNESS BEFORE COMMERCE COMMISSION.

Declares Railroads Falsify and Are Guilty of Stock and Profit Juggling—Proves a Tartar.

Chicago.—Declaring the western railroads were guilty of stock and profit juggling, W. R. Stubbs, governor of Kansas, held that the assertions of the roads that an increase in freight rates was necessary were not justified by facts.

Governor Stubbs was testifying before the interstate commerce commission at its session here in the rate hearing.

He made one of the strongest witnesses that the shippers had placed on the stand. He insisted that the valuation the roads had put on their property was altogether excessive and he offered to reproduce all the lines in Kansas for $25,000 a mile and to give a bond of $1,000,000 for performance. Such a figure, he said, would yield him 10 per cent profit at least.

Much of the stocks of the railroads, according to Governor Stubbs' testimony, consist of water and profits, and are jugged through the placing in permanent improvements of surpluses and then the capitalizing of the improvements.

The governor proved a tartar for the railroad attorneys when cross-examined, and his sallies kept the officials and others at the hearing in gales of laughter.

RIOTS IN DRIVERS' STRIKE

Walkout of Express Employees Spreads to New York City—Violence Follows—Business at Standstill.

New York.—The strike of drivers and helpers employed by all the larger express companies that for several days has been in progress at the railroad terminals on the Jersey City side of the North river, spread to New York Friday, and as a result the entire business of receipt and delivery of all goods in transit was materially affected.

The situation is in a veritable state of chaos with an outlook for even worse conditions unless the express matter piling up at the railroad depots can be moved. The police seem powerless to render sufficient protection and the men ready to hire out as strike-breakers are very diffident about applying for the positions. Scenes of violence were enacted all over the city, wagons being stoned and drivers beaten.

In Jersey City and Hoboken, where the large stables are located, the strike has completely tied up the companies and perishable goods, as a consequence, are accumulating in huge piles.

The express companies have made tentative application to Governor Fort for the calling out of the militia to guard their wagons and buildings, but the Jersey City police authorities are confident that they can handle the situation.

HE BLEW TOO HARD

I. C. LOSES TAX CASE

STATE OF ILLINOIS IS VICTOR OVER RAILROAD UNDER DECISION BY HIGH COURT.

VERRULES LINE DEMURRER

Case Goes to La Salle County Court to Be Heard on Merits—Action Based on Findings of Accountants That Reports Had Been Changed.

Springfield, Ill.—A decision of the supreme court of Illinois was handed down Friday in the tax case of the state against the Illinois Central Railroad company.

The state won every important contention with the exception that the opinion holds the accounts prior to 1905 have been accepted by the state and payment made thereon, and that therefore they are not subject to further inquiry.

But for the future settlements and for the settlement of all accounts since Governor Deneen came into office, the court lays down hard and fast rules for accounting by which the state will reap a reward of $2,000,000 a year more in taxes than it has been receiving from the Illinois Central Railroad company.

When the Illinois Central tendered its first payment under Governor Deneen's administration he accepted the money with the understanding the accounting upon which the money was tendered was subject to revision. This act on the part of the governor, the court holds, makes all transactions with the road during his administration subject to further accounting.

The court remands the case to the circuit court of La Salle county, with instructions to proceed in accordance with the views in its opinion. Unless the railroad accepts the court's decision as final, the circuit court of La Salle county will no doubt appoint a master to go into all the details of the accounting since 1905, and the case may be prolonged indefinitely. At present the railroad is paying approximately $1,000,000 to the state every year.

The suit against the Illinois Central was filed early in December, 1907, by the attorney general, following a message from Governor Deneen to the legislature, declaring that the road had been so manipulating its accounts as to credit millions of its earnings to the non-charter lines, not subject to the tax of 7 per cent. Later accounting swelled the amount which Governor Deneen declared the road owed to the state from $5,000,000 to $15,000,000.

WILSON MAKES MILK RULING

Bans From Agricultural Department All Lactical Fluid Not Subjected to Tuberculin Test.

Washington.—An order issued by Secretary of Agriculture Wilson bans from the department and all its branches milk which has not been subjected to the tuberculin test. This is so important a ruling that all the departments are expected to have similar orders issued. This will be a severe blow to the dealers in milk who are opposing pasteurization and tuberculin tests and many of these dealers have undertaken to attack pasteurization before the department of justice.

VICTORY MEANS HIGH RATES

RAILROAD HEADS ADMIT INTENT TO ADD TO INCREASE.

Burlington Vice-President and Counsel Qualify Statement With Higher Cost Argument.

Chicago.—The hope that a victory in their fight for increased freight rates will give them an opportunity to make still farther advances is the reason given by the western railroads for the tenacity displayed in the battle they are waging before the interstate commerce commission.

This was admitted by C. G. Burnham, vice-president of the Burlington railroad, in charge of traffic, and by Attorney Dawes, counsel of the road, at the hearing.

The admission was qualified, however, by statements that the increase asked for in the present hearing would only offset reductions that had been made by the commission in recent cases and that the further advances would furnish the roads the money declared necessary to meet ever-mounting expenses and the cost of needed improvements and equipment.

DEPUTIES STIR UP TUMULT

Disorder in French Chamber During Strike Debate Rivals Turbulence of Revolution.

Paris.—The debate on the railway strike in which the government has been bitterly attacked in the chamber of deputies by the Socialists, has taken a new and dramatic turn.

During Saturday's session, which was not only the most violent in the history of the French parliament, but rivaled in disorder and turbulence the sessions of the national convention during the French revolution, Premier Briand, smiling under the repeated attacks of M. Jaures, the leader of the Socialists, and others, leaped to his feet and, defying the cabinet's suppression of the strike as a revolutionary outbreak, exclaimed: "If the actual laws had been insufficient we would not have hesitated to resort even to illegality for the purpose of preserving the fatherland."

An uproar followed these words. The Socialists jumped up and were joined by a number of radicals. With shouts of anger they moved towards the tribune, crying "Resign! Dictator, resign!"

Finally, M. Brisson, president of the chamber, raised cries from the Socialists, adjourned the debate.

Why the Boy Gave Thanks.

Alan had played the entire day with little brother without an impatient word. After saying his customary prayer that night, his mother suggested that he add: "I thank God I was not impatient with little brother to-day." This he did with much fervency; after which he remarked that there were some other things he would like to thank God for, and forthwith he closed his eyes and said:

"I thank God I offered my candy to father before taking any myself."

"I thank God I offered my candy to mother before taking any myself."

"I thank God I offered my candy to little brother before taking any myself."

"And I thank God there was some left."—Lippincott's.

His Point of View.

"John, dear," queried the young wife, glancing up from the physical culture magazine she was perusing, "what is your idea of a perfect figure?"

"Well," replied her husband, "100,000 may not be perfection, but it's near enough to satisfy a man of my simple tastes."

Weak Heart

Many people suffer from weak hearts. They may experience shortness of breath on exertion, pain over the heart, or dizzy feelings, oppressed breathing after meals or their eyes become blurred, their heart is not sufficiently strong to pump blood to the extremities, and they have cold hands and feet, or poor appetite because of weakened blood supply to the stomach. A heart tonic and alterative should be taken which has no bad after-effect. Such is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which contains no dangerous narcotics nor alcohol.

The ingredients, as attested under oath, are Stearns root (Collinsonia canadensis), Bloodroot (Sanguinaria canadensis), Golden Seal root (Hydrastis canadensis), Queen's root (Squilla spicata), Black Cherryl bark (Prunus virginiana), Mead's root (Rudolphia spicata), with triple refined glycerine, prepared in a scientific laboratory in a way that no druggist could imitate.

This tonic contains no alcohol to shrink up the red blood corpuscles; but, on the other hand, it increases their number and they become round and healthy. It helps the human system in the constant manufacture of rich, red blood. It helps the stomach to assimilate or take up the proper elements from the food, thereby helping digestion and curing dyspepsia, heart-burn and many uncomfortable symptoms, stops excessive tissue waste in convalescence from fever, for the run-down, anemic, thin-blooded people, the "Discovery" is refreshing and vitalizing. Stick to this safe and sane remedy, and refuse all "just as good" medicines offered by the druggist who is looking for a larger profit. Nothing but Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will do you half as much good.

A cartoon illustration. On the left, a rooster with black and white feathers stands on a small, dark, rectangular pedestal. To the right of the pedestal, a man wearing a top hat and a dark suit stands looking at the rooster. He has a speech bubble coming from his mouth that contains the text: "WHAT IS IT ANY WAY?". The entire scene is enclosed in a rectangular frame.

As there is no way of measuring what might happen if this force were not employed, its members do not always receive the full amount of credit to which their unremitting care and attention entitle them.
